

Dedication: This poem was requested by ksharbaugh from the Acorn Café. She wanted a poem on atonement.

Repent

*I am sorry love
I'm just too broken
I was wrong to you
And those words I'd spoken*

*How can I change?
I just want to prove
How sorry I am
The whole world I'd move*

*You hold my hand when I cry in the night
You tell me that everything will be all right
How can I tell you now how bad it feels
To be lying to you day to day.*

*I am sorry,
I'm too broken
Please just give up on me.
I am sorry
These words I've spoken
Too many times to be ok.*

*Why do you stand by me?
And say that you are sorry
For little things that don't mean much
Because you're hear with me.*

*I am sorry,
These words I've spoken
Far too many times.
Please don't cry
I want to change
This time I know why*

*These words I've spoken
The same words I've broken
Mean more to me now
I'm sorry, I love you
They now feel real.*
