

A Mother's Day

The pain of life is softened by your touch of loving care
And those who know the comfort that your presence has to share
You heal the wounds of flesh and heart, your tenderness convey
A life of peace within one's self is that which you portray
The bonding of your family, needs the strength you hold within
As time without your love for us we know would be akin
To sorrow felt so deep because, your loss would be too great
Yet, we know you're always there relieving most the weight
This Mother's Day now come to pass, we honor you in true
Our mom to us, in all our hopes, has always seen us through
